Healthy gardens are alive with color, movement, and sound - the buzzing of bees, the song of cheery, well-fed birds, and the flitting about of bright butterflies, drunk on nectar. They're happy places to be for their human visitors as well as their winged inhabitants. Roll out the welcome mat for your local insect and avian contingent with these nectar- and pollen-rich plants. You'll be providing vital energy sources for our threatened honeybee population and getting free pest control, compliments of the birds.
